John 1:1-18

Our God moves in the quiet, everyday moments. He pierces our heart, inviting us to Him, and quietly waits for our response.

This New Year's, let us rest at the manger of the Divine Infant. Bring your feelings of weariness and despair to Him. Be with the Lord and let Him love you only like He can love you. Your heart may still be restless, but the Lord is with you and is drawing you ever closer to His heart.

In drawing nearer to Him, may we surrender our expectations for this new year and trust in His plan.

Points to Ponder: In the 2,000 plus years that have unfolded since that night in Bethlehem, certainly there are instances when darkness has been diminished, when hurts have been healed, when pain has been alleviated, when the human spirit has shone with compassion, and inclusivity, and hospitality. Yet, we still experience so much darkness in the world.

'The light shines in the darkness,' writes John. And maybe that's the thing. Maybe that's the gospel writer's point. It is not that the light obliterates the darkness; it is simply that the light is there, sometimes helping to change a situation, and making it much better, but more often the light is a steady, (albeit flickering) constant, faithful presence. This, I think, is the message of the incarnation, the story behind the story that we will tell each other this day. God enters into the darkness to sit alongside of us as a Providential advocate, a Providential presence – God with us – Emmanuel. God refuses to dwell in the heavens above and from a safe distance watch the drama of human life play out. Instead, our Provident God climbs right into the darkest places to be with us; and in that holy and luminous action, we find reason enough to hope. So, wherever there is darkness in your life, in my life, anywhere in our world, we can be absolutely sure – that our Provident God, our Emmanuel, God with us is there too – a Light in our darkness. And because we are in relationship with the Provident God who is the Light, THE Source of the Light, we, too are called to be Light.
